Gym Sales Playbook

How to get gyms on board — a simple guide for the sales team

INTERNAL USE ONLY

The Offer: Pilot Partner Program

We don't just "give free months." We invite gyms to become Pilot Partners. This makes them feel invested, filters out time-wasters, and gives us real feedback.

> The deal in one sentence:
> "We give you 3 months free. In return, you onboard your coaches, jump on a short monthly call with us, and let us use your story if you love it."

What the gym gets

- 3 months completely free — no credit card, no commitment
- Personal setup help — we configure their first coaches and clients
- Direct line to our team — priority support during the pilot

What we ask in return

- Onboard at least 3 coaches and 10 clients in the first month
- A 30-minute feedback call once a month (that's it)
- If they like the product, we can use their name & logo as a case study

Why This Works

1. Zero risk for the gym

   They don't pay anything and don't sign a contract. The only thing they "spend" is time setting up — which is exactly what gets them hooked.

2. Once the data is in, they stay

   After 3 months of workouts, client history, and progress photos, switching away feels like starting from scratch. The product retains itself.

3. The feedback obligation filters out freebie-hunters

   Someone who won't commit to a 30-min call was never going to pay. This keeps our pipeline clean.

4. Gyms talk to each other

   One happy gym owner in a neighborhood tells three others. Early pilots become our best marketing channel.

How to Talk to a Gym Owner

Keep it casual and confident. Here's a simple script you can adapt:

> "Hey [Name], we're building a coaching platform that makes it super easy for your trainers to program workouts and track clients from their phone.
> We're picking a handful of gyms in [city] to try it free for 3 months — no strings. All we ask is honest feedback so we can make it great.
> The setup takes about 15 minutes — I can do it for you. Interested?"

Key phrases that work

Say this	Why it works
"A handful of gyms"	Creates scarcity — feels exclusive, not desperate
"No strings"	Removes fear of being locked in
"I can set it up for you"	Removes the work — biggest objection gone
"Honest feedback"	Positions them as an expert, not a charity case

Common objections

They say...	You say...
"We already use [X]"	"Perfect — try both side by side for free and keep whichever your coaches prefer."
"I don't have time"	"I'll set everything up. You just tell your coaches to download the app."
"What happens after 3 months?"	"You pick a plan that fits, or walk away with zero cost. Simple."

"Sounds too good to be true"	"We need real gyms using it to make the product better. Your feedback is the price."

After They Say Yes

Speed matters. The faster they see value, the more likely they convert.

1. Same day: Set up their account
   Create the gym, add their head coach, and load 2–3 sample workouts so it doesn't look empty.

2. Day 1–3: Help coaches add their first real clients
   Offer a quick 15-min video call or in-person walkthrough. Get at least one coach actively assigning workouts.

3. Week 2: Check in
   Quick text: "How's it going? Anything confusing?" Fix issues fast — this is when most drop-offs happen.

4. Month 1: First feedback call
   Ask what they love, what's missing, and whether their clients are engaging. Take notes — this is gold for the product team.

5. Month 3: Conversion conversation
   By now the data lock-in has done its job. Present pricing and ask which plan fits. Don't discount — the value should speak for itself.

Do's & Don'ts

DO

- Offer to set up everything yourself
- Follow up within 24 hours of a "yes"
- Frame it as a partnership, not charity
- Keep the pilot to 3 months max
- Ask for a testimonial at the end
- Target gyms with 3+ coaches (bigger potential)

DON'T

- Give more than 3 months free
- Offer big discounts after the pilot (anchors low value)
- Skip the feedback calls (that's our intel)
- Onboard a gym and then disappear
- Waste time on gyms that won't commit to onboarding
- Bad-mouth competitors — just be better

Quick Reference: The Numbers

Metric	Target
Free pilot length	3 months
Min. coaches to onboard	3
Min. clients to onboard	10
Feedback calls	1 per month (30 min)
Time to first coach assigning workouts	< 3 days
Follow-up after "yes"	< 24 hours

Remember: We're not giving something away for free. We're investing in a partner who gives us feedback, a case study, and word-of-mouth. That's worth way more than 3 months of revenue.
